In re: Docket Number 02-278

To Whom It May Concern:

Indiana's Attorney General recently notified Indiana residents of the Consumer Bankers Association (CBA) decision to challenge Indiana's Telephone Privacy law in a proceeding before the Federal Communications Commission (FCC).

Under this action, I understand that the CBA is attempting to impose the federal "established business relationship" exemption on Indiana consumers. If successful, anybody that I currently have a business relationship with (e.g., bank, credit card company, long distance carrier) will be able to call me as often as they want. This is unacceptable.

Indiana's Do Not Call List law should not be weakened by the CBA actions. As an Indiana resident and Do Not Call list participant, I wholly support any and all efforts by Mr. Carter (and for that matter, the FCC) to strengthen the existing state and federal telephone privacy laws. As a Do Not Call participant, I value my personal privacy and time more than any goods or services that could be offered in an unsolicited telephone call.

I strongly urge you to oppose the CBA petition and to allow Indiana consumers to self-select into receiving such unsolicited calls by way of the Do Not Call list.

Sincerely,

William J. Janowicz
